More Dangerous Position.

Twelve Tugs Work in Vain To-Day to Bourke Cockran the Spokesman Get Her Off.

Her Stern Exposed to the Full Force of the Waves.

Steerage Passengers Landed-Their Sufferings from Fire and Cold.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. ] SANDY HOOK. Oct. 11.—Another attempt was made this morning to haul the City of New York from her sticky resting place in Gedney's Chan-nel, but like the rest it proved ineffectual, and the steamer is still hard and fast aground.

This morning's work, however, leaves the steamer in a far more dangerous position than she has heretofore occupied.

All of the tugs which helped in the work last night anchored in the Horseshoe in readiness to make another trial this morning. At 7 o'clock Capt. Dave Roach, on the powerful sea-going ing Vulcau, gave the signal to the rest of the fleet to proceed to sea. In ten minutes the rest of the tugs and steamers were on their way. They passed Buoy 5, off the point of the Hook, in single file, with the Vulcan in front.

Following came the Edwin M. Millard, the Inman Company's private tug; the Lewis Pulver, the John J. Smith. the Emperor, the sidewheeler George Starr, the side-wheeler John E. Moore, the side-wheeler William Fletcher, the wrecking-tug C. W. Morse and the tug Cheney. At 8 o'clock all of the tugs and steamers were surrounding the steamer, and seemed to be adopting different tactics from the work of vesterials.

be adopting different tactics from the work of yesterelay.

Every hawser was attached to the stern of the vessel, and under their united targing the stern of the huge vessel swing slowly around to the north and in clear water.

When she finally headed about southeast she stopped and the tags could not budge her another inch.

At 9 olock two more tags passed out and went to the assistance of their puffing sisters.

At 9.10, high water, another trial was made by the twelve tags and steamers, but they could not budge the steamer.

They persisted, however, for half an hour longer. Then they stopped tagsing.

It locked at the time as though they had given up the attempt.

It looked at the time as though they had given up the attempt.

At 10 o clock the tugs gave it up and steamed in towards the Horseshoe. Two lighters went out and began to take cargo from the steamer. This will lighten her considerably, and it is probable that the steamer will be hauled off tonight.

The swinging around of her stern leaves her in a very dangerons position. Should a sea arise the steamer will be badly strained and injured.

At the office of the Inman line only scanty information was received this morning about the City of New York.

The steerage passengers were brought to the city, landing at the Red Star dock in Hoboken at 1.30 o'clock this morning.

These poor creatures suffered terribly on the voyage over. Their trip was one constant privation.

voyage over. Their trip was one constant privation.

For twelve hours they were nearly roasted to death by the heat from the fire, which broke out in the coal bunkers, and last night they were packed like sheep on two miserable little steamboats without a particle of shelter.

The only inclosed places on the George Starr and the William Fletcher are the pilot-houses. On the upper and lower decks everything is open, and the wind had a clean sweep.

Into these pilot-houses crowded the Custom-House officers and male passengers, while thinly clad women and children, many of them lil, were forced to face the bitter cold blasts outside.

The immigrants, on arrival, were transferred castle Garden. There were nearly five hunto Castle Garden. There were nearly five flundred of them.

The real cause of the steamer's sliding on the mud was the fact that just before reaching the channel a pilot-boat flashed a light right in front of the steamer. The pilot ported his helm sharply and then endeavored to bring her back on her course. The vessel did not act quickly enough and she slid on the mud.

Swindled with the Tanner Idea. [SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.]
PURVIS, Miss., Oct. 10.—A. F. Mott, alias James Thompson, alias Edward Baker, claiming to hail from Wisconsin, has been working the pension racket on the negroes in Jasper, Jones, Covington, Smith and Marion counties, and his Covington, Smith and Marion counties, and his operations have just come to light. He carried with him a bundle of pension blanks and would exact a fee from every darkey that wanted a pension. He told them all they had to do was to pay him $5 each and give their names and addresses, and in due course of time Unele Sam would send the surplus in charge of a trusted agent and dispense cash with lavish hand to all negroes who complied with the surrement. After receiving cash he would sign a receipt printed in Latin, which read when translated into English. "Blessed are those that expect something for nothing, for they are sure to be disappointed."

The Records Refute His Accuser,

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. -Acting-Secretary of the Treasury Batcheller, speaking to-day about the reflection cast upon the integrity of the late ex-Secretary Daniel Manning by an anonymous ex-Secretary Daniel Manning by an anonymous contributor to the Conscience Fund, who alleged that a former draft for $5.000 sent by him had not been turned into the Treasury, said:

"The statement is false and does gross injustice to the memory of a good man. The sum alluded to, which, to be exact, was $4,000, was covered into the Treasury as soon as received, as the books of the Department show. The bewappers that took occasion to criticize Mr. Manning's administration of the Treasury Department upon the unsupported charge of an anonymous writer were, to put it middly, too hasty."

The City of New York Shifted Into a Tammany Offered Him Its Nomination in the Ninth Congress District of the Committee.

The Ex-President Having Declined, Amos Cummings Is Slated as Sunset Cox's Successor.

Many are the conjectures which have been made regarding the identity of the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Ninth District, to succeed the late Samuel Sullivan Cox, and all guesses are said to have fallen wide of the mark The man who will carry the banner of the Democracy in this contest has been determined on, and is said to be no other than Amos J. Cummings. Tammany Hall will hold its Convention next Thursday and will be the first to put him in the field, according to the best advices.

The Counties, it is asserted, cannot fail to inlorse Mr. Cummings's nomination at their Convention, to be held the following Monday, for he represented them in Co gress from the Sixth District during the last term.

The fact has been kept very quiet, but the commination was first offered to ex-President Grover Cleveland by a committee from Tamnany Hall, consisting of ex-Congressman W.

many Hall, consisting of ex-Congressman W. Bourke Cockrau. Assessor Edward Cahili and Charles Steckler.

Mr. Cockran was the spokesman, and pointed out to Mr. Cleveland the alvantages which would accrue to the rarty by having him on the floor of Congress, where he might advocate the issues which he had made as President.

It was urged that Mr. Cox was a man of preminent ability and more than national reputation, and Mr. Cleveland would he a worthy successor in these narticulars.

The case of President Adams, who returned to Washington as a Congressman from Massachusetts, which was referred to by Tag Wonlin, was cited as a precedent for Mr. Cleveland.

Assessor Cahili acknowledged to an Evening World reporter that he was one of the ambassadors of Tammany on this occasion, and said that Mr. Cleveland took the matter under serious consideration, and it is but recently that he signified his unwillingness to stand as a candidate.

Mr. Julius Harberger, the President of the Steckler Association, was at one time seriously considered for the nomination because of his great popularity in the district.
Although an uncompromising Tammsny Hall man, it is claimed for him that he could carry with case that stronghold of the County Democracy, the Twelfth Assembly District.
The boom for Col. William L. Brown assumed no mean proportions: but, as was stated in The Eversing World, his business cares would preclude the possibilities of the consideration of his name in connection with the nomination.
It is more than probable that Col. E. A. Mc-Alpin, the tobacco manufacturer, will be the Republican candidate. Republican candidate.

Counties and Tammany Will Wage War for Local Offices.

"No union !" is now the cry. It has sounded in the councils of the County Democracy, and the walls of the Tammany tepee have echoed it. Chamberlain Richard Croker says that he is not in favor of a union, but he modestly adds that that question will be left to the County Coroner Levy Trying To-Day to Clear Convention, which meets next Tuesday. The union which seems most probable says Mr. Croker, "is one between the County Democracy and the Republicans. I am informed that such an one has already been made in the Sixth Assembly District, where the Republicans are to be given the Assemblyman and the Counties to take the Alderman. "To avoid the consequences which would in-

"To avoid the consequences which would inevitably result when next its delegates apply for admission to the State Convention, should the County Democracy unite with the Republicans on local nominations, I believe the programme to be for the County Convention of the Counties, which meets on Saturday, to fail to nominate until a 'Citizens' tleket is put in the field.

'That ticket I expect them to indorse and then attempt to secure a Republican indorsement of it.

"They can then say to our demand that they be not admitted to the councils of the party of the State that they did not unite with the Republicans, but that the Republicans indorsed their nominees, for which action they should not be held responsible.

"There are many features about these unions which are bad, the principle one being that they frequently foist upon the people candidates whose records are not carefully considered, and who have not the strength or character which they should have.

It is an open secret that but two or three of the County Democracy leaders are in favor of a union with Tainmany. on any nominations.

The reason for this is said to be found in the little love they bear.Gov. Hill for his signing of the Police Justice and other bills which have added to Tammany Hall's power and patronage as well as for his insisting on the nomination of Tabor for Attorney-General.

This expressed opposition to a union by the County leaders was declared by a well-informed Taumany man to be a big case of "bluff."

"They say they want no union, when the fact is that they dlike overtures from us for one. I don't think they'll receive them, though.

"There isn't a district in the city they can carry, unless it is the Twelfth, and that they have a bare chance of capturing."

There were a number of men in the place, who were discussing their various employers.

Clark made some derogatory remark about a man named Anderson, whereupon Carey struck him in the face, knocking him down.

Clark got up and walked quietly away.

He went to his sandboat and armed himself with a six-shooter.

About a. 36 o'clock in the evening he returned and stood in front of Casey's saloon and began talking politics with several friends.

Carcy strolled along soon after and renewed his quarrel.

Clark got another punch and then drew his pistol and fired once at Carcy.

The bullet entered in front of the right ear and penetrated the brain.

Carcy fell to the sidewalk and was carried into a small room behing the saloon.

Father Dounelly, of the East Fourteenth street Roman Catholic Church, was summoned, but as he reached Carcy's side the latter drew a heavy breath and died.

Clark went to Alderman Gilligan's saloon, at Seventeenth street and Avenue C, where he exclaimed, "I shot Jack Carcy and am going to give myself up."

Hastings took the pistol from him there.

As Clark stepped out of the saloon Policeman Research the pinned took him to the East Twenty-second street station.

The tragedy was the culmination of a feud of several years standing.

The original cause of the ill-feeling is forgotten, but two years ago Clark broke a bottle on the head of Carey's brother.

Carey was a brute when drunk, but rather popular among his associates on account of his great size and strength. He was over six feet tall and weighed nearly two hundred pounds. He lived at 624 East Seventeenth street, and was not married. He was twenty-four years old.

Clark is a single man also, is thirty-six years ld and lives at Seventeenth street and First and fives at Sectionated street and risk avenue.

He was perfectly cool and collected this morning and said to an Evening World reporter: "I will get off all right, as I shot in self-defense," Carey was no relation to Informer James Catey, who was shot and killed on the steamer Kilfann Castie, as asserted by a morning paper. Clark was held to await the result of the Cor-

Up the Gerlach Mystery.

Coroner Levy began an investigation this forenoon into the mysterious death of Louisa Gerlach, the young Staten Island girl, who was found dead in Bedford Park, in the Annexed District, with a bottle labelled carbolic acid by her side, on the morning of Sept. 30. Fred. Bender, the cabinet-maker, who was with Miss Gerlach on the morning of her death was present. Mrs. Dora Gerlach, mother of Louisa, was also there.

Coroner Levy told the jury that the remarkable mystery in the case was that the girl should have been found dying in such an out-of-theway place so far from her home, especially in view of what would be shown to have taken place the night before.

Deputy Coroner Jenkins, who made a post-mortem examination of the body of Miss Ger-lach, gave the opinion that she "committed suicide by taking carbolic acid poison during control according Thomas Murphy, a policeman of the High-brigde Precinct, testified that his attention was first called to Miss Gerlach about 8 a. M., Sept. 30, by a boy, who said she was dying, at the corner of Bainbridge avenue and the Southern boulevard.

He found her unconscious, and picked up a small bottle by her side which smelt strongly of small bottle by her side which smelt strongly of carbolic acid.

He caused the removal of the young woman to the police station, where she died in about fif-teen minutes afterward. In the pocket of the girl's dress was found a letter addressed to her and signed 'C."

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—The Athletic Club officials refuse to say whether they have made arrangements to play off postponed games with St. Louis, but as the Athletic and St. Louis clubs have been engaged to play at Lebanon on Oct. 22, it is very likely that they have reached some understanding. Over the McCready Million.

WHALEY .- On Thursday morning, LOUSING WAL-DROM, wife of William Whaley, daughter of the late N. L. McGready. Funeral strictly private

The story of Mrs. Whaley's recent experiences and unexpected death, as alleged, from a broken heart, is one that is sad in all its details. Mrs. Whaley was married about a year ago

She inherited a fortune of $1,000,000 from her father, the late Commodore Nathantel Mcready, who was worth about $2,000,000. Two months ago she was taken sick at her cottage at Arverne-by-the-Sea. All her relatives, except Mr. Whaley, were then in Europe.

Mrs. Whaley's condition becoming worse, she was brought back to her residence, 30 West Washington square. She was delirious much of the time, and during her delirium, it is said, declared that her husband had persuaded her to mortgage her hus-band a building she owns at 38 Maiden lane for $125,000, and had also gained possession of $80,000 she had in trust for the benefit of Dr. McCready, of the Washington Life Insurance Coupeny.

McCready, of the Washington Life Insurance Company.

Since that time there has been a bitter family quarrel between the relatives of Mrs. Whaley and the husband, they atlegting that his conduct was the cause of her sickness, which has now resulted in death.

The relatives also allege that Mr. Whaley has squandered in cambling over $100,000 or this money, and they have brought in allegations of marital infideity which, they say, caused Mrs. Whaley to pine away of a broken heart.

All these charges Mr. Whaley indignantly demes. He says the whole affair is a private family matter. Both he and his lawyer insist that the money got on mortgazes was obtained with his wife's entire sanction. He has intimated that he will bring suits for damages to establish his innocence.

He walked through Washington street and, when near Canal street, was accested by two men, who demanded money.

"I have no money," he replied, though he had $85 in his pocket.

He had no sconer got the words out of his mouth when he received a stunning blow in the face which felied him to the sidewalk.

He was then unmegaifully kicked and beaten about the head, tace and body, and while he lay in a semi-comatose state, one of the men put his hand in his pocket and took the $85.

The police have not yet captured the other man.
